City fears a takeover

PLEASANTON — A Bay Area master environmental management plan could strip cities of their land use planning powers, according to worried elected officials here.

Tuesday, city council voted to urge the Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG) to delete all land use controls from its controversial plan.

The motion was opposed by member Joyce LeClaire, the ABAG representative for all cities in Alameda County. LeClaire has worked closely with ABAG and insists that land use controls are the only way to force sprawling cities such as Fremont or San Jose to plan with environmental considerations.

But mayor Bob Philcox, vice-mayor Ken Mercer, Bill Herlihy and Frank Brandes see the controls as threats to local power.

Pleasanton is a member of the nine-county agency, but has limited weight. ABAG was formed in accordance with a federal law requiring regions to set plans and schedules for acheiving air quality standards.

And it is the air quality management section of the ABAG plan that many cities believe will usurp local control.

Last week, ABAG agreed to postpone adopting the plan until June — a two-month extention.

That extention may not be long enough, according to Herlihy who is council's liason to ABAG.

"It (the plan) is a square nut in a round hole and it just won't fit. We need more time to work out a better plan that will be right the first time around," Herlihy said Tuesday.

Council is recommending that ABAG delete 36 of the 49 proposed actions in the air quality section, essentially taking the teeth out of the plan.

Most of the actions work to encourage new industry in cities where housing and labor forces already exist. The actions aim to cut down on commuters and coordinate growth throughout the greater Bay Area.

But Pleasanton, with its low labor force, tight housing market and air pollution problem, might suffer under those actions. The city receives almost 50 percent of its revenue from property tax and is trying to encourage more "clean industry" to move here.

According to city manager Clay Brown, the federal government will watch-dog the Bay Area once the plan is adopted. Land use controls aren't required to be in the plan, but once local governments put them in, the federal and state governments have a right to enforce them.

Enforcement methods would primarily be through economic sanctions. A city not complying with the plan might not be eligible for grant funds for city or local road projects. Currently, those grants often pay for 80 to 90 percent of road safety projects in town.

ABAG is now collecting recommendations from all members and is reviewing their discord with the plan.

A place for battered wives

The Tri-Valley Haven, the first shelter for battered women in the Valley, will open next week, and already there is a waiting list to get in, said Cathie Brown, one of eight women on the Haven's board.

"The shelter is not a solution to wife battering," said Brown, "it is more of a Band-Aid. It won't stop beatings, but will offer an alternative."

The Haven will open March 1 with only two months' rent in reserve. "And that doesn't include utilities or food or anything," said Brown.

In addition to the volunteer board, four staff positions will be funded through the Comprehensive Employment Training Act. A $25,000 federal grant is expected July 1 of this year.

The shelter is opening with such limited resources because of what Brown said is "a desperate need for a shelter here. People are already on the waiting list to get in." She said in January she received an average of two calls a day from battered women.

That adds up to over 70 calls from battered women since the group began in March of last year. "The majority needed a place to stay immediately," said Brown.

Presently, the eight members of the Haven's board have taken in, or arranged for women and their children to stay in private homes. Stays which often lasted two weeks or longer, said Brown.

The Tri-Valley Haven will have facilities to house six persons, and will accept women and their children. They will be supplied with what they need to survive, such as food, clothing and transportation, said Brown.

"When women leave their homes they are lucky to get out with the clothes on their back," said Brown. The CETA staff will also help those in the shelter with what Brown calls "survival skills."

Future farmers

Livermore High School student teacher Jim Boero examines the wild game bird area, which houses everything from peacocks to doves. The school's agriculture department, which is the largest in California's north coast region, according to instructor Jim Coelho, features studies ranging from land surveying to meat butchery. It's providing America's future farmers with some interesting training.

Lab's bomb still useful

Although Congress voted not to build the B-1 bomber yesterday, there is still hope that the bomb developed for the craft by Lawrence Livermore Laboratory can be used for a less expensive war plane.

Some congressmen are supporting the idea that the Lab's Full Fuzing Option (FUFO) bomb can be used in another bomber, the FB-111.

The House reversed an earlier decision to produce the fifth and sixth models of the B-1 because money for the plane was attached another bill that would not get Senate approval due to the B-1.

By eliminating the B-1 project, the Senate can now take action on the catch-all appropriations bill which includes funding for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor.

Candidates' night set

The League of Women Voters will hold a candidates' night tonight, starting at 7:30 p.m. in Granada student union building. The 10 candidates, including write-in David Eller, will be answering questions and giving brief presentations.

A look at package plants

Alameda County supervisors will examine a proposed policy on whether to allow package type sewage treatment plants for small development in rural areas which cannot be reached by municipal systems. The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. today in the supervisors' chambers, fifth floor, 1221 Oak St.

New superintendent

Choice seen soon

The boards of the Amador and Pleasanton school districts have set mid-April as the deadline for receiving applications for the position of superintendent.

Meeting with recently-hired consultant Ferd Kiesel for the first time Tuesday, the boards developed a tentative time line that calls for appointment of a person to succeed Dr. Bruce Newlin sometime between May 17 and 30. The new superintendent would be expected to assume duties locally between July 1 and 15.

Though trustees have begun drafting a job description and plan to offer a minimum salary of $37,500 (plus fringe benefits), they have not given consideration to a specific length of contract.

A brochure including descriptions of the job and the districts will be distributed the first week of March. Kiesel, an executive with the California School Boards Association and based in Sacramento, will select two persons to assist him in the search for qualified candidates. They will be paid from the $5,000 approved for the superintendent search by the boards.

Kiesel and the other two consultants will screen applications April 15-22, narrowing the number to about 20.

Local school board members will review the applications and select six to eight of them for interviews the last week in April. Trustees plan to visit the communities of the top candidate(s) May 8-12, talking to people currently working with the candidate(s).

The district says "If an outstanding candidate is found during this stage, trustees hope to make a public announcement of their choice May 17-30.

Interviewing of the "six to eight" candidates presumably would be accomplished in Pleasanton.

Trustees added that the minimum salary figure of $37,500 is "negotiable based on the experience and qualifications of the applicant."

Young thief settles for a Ford

A 17-year-old Pleasanton youth arrested early Tuesday in Merced on suspicion of car theft apparently took the "wrong" car.

California Highway Patrol officers said the youth took a Ford from a Muirwood Drive residence but was stopped for speeding in Merced about 2 a.m. Officers determined the car was stolen even though the owner had not yet reported it missing.

The suspect told police he had taken car keys to a Porsche from a locker at Foothill High School but could not find the sports car when he made his move.

Batzel testifies on Lab budget

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Lawrence Livermore Laboratory Director Roger Batzel testified behind closed doors Wednesday for a House Armed Services subcommittee on LLL's weapons budget for fiscal 1979.

Under consideration were Carter Administration plans to limit the nuclear warhead research budget to an increase of less than 5 percent, slightly less than the projected inflation rate.

Batzel submitted no formal, written statement. That means that if he raised any objections to the Carter budget, it could only have been in response to questions from committee members.

Downtown

Solving the noon blues

PLEASANTON — During an often tense meeting yesterday with Amador High School students, representatives of the Downtown Business Association threatened to seek a closed campus unless teens loitering during lunch hour are dispersed.

"We absolutely insist that a solution to this problem be enacted before the school year ends. If not, we will go to the school board and demand a closed campus."

With that statement, association president Joyce Getty began the meeting with over 50 students, including student leaders, in the school library. The meeting was ostensibly called to work out a solution for both merchants and students, but at one point it seemed that the meeting would turn into a restrained name-calling, blame-throwing session.

Amador students have, for the past 15 years, been allowed to leave campus during lunch. Merchants argue that up to 50 percent of the littering and loitering problem would be solved if the school changed its "open campus" rule.

The students present yesterday resist that idea, saying the 1,926 teens at Amador will be punished for what a small minority is doing.

It should be the police department's job to control what teens do off campus, most students argued. Capt. Ron Nelson, sitting in on the meeting, retorted that it is not illegal to walk or stand on a public street, thus police hands are often tied.

All agreed that many blocking the sidewalks of Main Street aren't students, but merchants claimed the older boys wouldn't come downtown if the high school girls weren't there.

Most of the arguments bantered back and forth yesterday have been voiced several times in past association meetings. But merchants did agree to try a last-ditch effort before going to the school board.

Debbie Lee, a member of the student council, offered to set up a meeting next Wednesday between merchants and those students who spend their noon hour on Main Street.

Burglaries on upswing

PLEASANTON — A Ridgewood Road resident who left his garage unlocked and car's trunk open for 30 minutes was burglarized of clothing valued at $507, police reported.

The man and his family had just returned home from a trip and were unloading the car when the theft occurred, police reported. The car, parked in the garage with its trunk open, was burglarized while the family was inside the residence. The theft occurred in a 30-minute period, police reported.

There are no suspects.

LIVERMORE — A vehicle parked at the Livermore Municipal Airport for three days was found without its rear wheels when the owner returned Monday, police reported.

The car was discovered resting on hubcaps. Two radial tires and two rims valued at $220 were missing. There are no suspects.

DUBLIN — A roof-mounted air conditioning unit was stolen from Scotsman Mobil Lease at 6117 Dougherty Road recently, sheriff's deputies reported.

The unit, valued at $450, had been plucked from a trailer parked there. There are no clues in the theft.

PLEASANTON — Approximately 200 two-by-fours valued at $370 were taken from a housing construction site next to Bordeaux Street last week, police reported.

A San Jose construction firm reported the theft. There are no suspects.

PLEASANTON — Burglars took $240 worth of 8-track tapes from a car parked in a Driftwood Way driveway last week, police reported.

The locked vehicle had been forced open. Twenty-four tapes and a case were reported missing.

Council seekers knock rivals

PLEASANTON — City council candidate Stan Kephart is calling statements made by two of his five opponents "irresponsible" and "misleading."

Setting off the first sparks in this otherwise low-key council race, Kephart has alledged that Edmond Alves and Oliver Anjo "aren't acquainted with the issues" and should become informed or "drop out."

Kephart charges that Anjo's anti-pipeline stand is misleading.

"He speaks of alternatives, but he's never really said what he has in mind," says the 37-year-old criminal justice specialist who supports the valley's controversial plans for a $28 million sewage export pipeline system.

Reached at his home yesterday, Anjo said Kephart's charges "are not valid at all." The 58-year-old CARD Committee member Has worked against the pipeline for over a year.

The city, he said, should irrigate farm fields and parkland with the sewage effluent instead of shipping it to the San Francisco bay.

If Pleasanton needs to buy more land on which to irrigate, so be it, according to Anjo, who says, "Why he (Kephart) even brought it up is beyond me."

Kephart has also attacked Alves' opposition to the pipeline and questioned what his opponent means when he says he supports total reclamation.

"I'm basically opposed to the pipeline," Alves told The Times, "I think in several years we could reclaim all our sewage water for re-use. But at this point in time it is in the best interest of the city to go ahead with the pipeline. The plans have gone too far to turn back now."

Both Alves and Anjo have indicated they would cut the city's park and recreation department budget — an action which Kephart has called irresponsible in during two candidate meetings this week.

He told The Times he receives several calls a day from voters confused about conflicting statements from candidates. The candidates, he says, should be held accountable for their words and he intends to draw attention to that.

The park and recreation activities take up 6 percent of the city's budget. Anjo has stated and maintains that the department shouldn't provide activities already offered by private business.

Tennis Faire is a point over which Anjo and Kephart clash loudly.

"Tennis courts are becoming a private country club for those who can afford to pay $5 or $6 an hour," Anjo said, noting that the courts just began operating in the black last month.

Kephart insists that Tennis Faire is a valuable service used by many residents and says Anjo is leading people to believe that the recreation department is financially dragging the city down the drain.

"I'm getting tired of it and I'm going on the offensive now," Kephart said.

His charges have caused Anjo to consider offensive tactics as well.

"The only person being dishonest with the public is Kephart. He accepted $490 from the fire department union here. Those are people who will be his employees if he's elected," Anjo retorted.

Somehow candidates Walt Wood, John Foley and Edwin Meyer have managed to stay out of the charges flying back and forth this week. But there are still two weeks left before the polls open March 7.

Bonds bring 'good bid' on pipeline

DUBLIN — A low bid consisting of a 5.8 percent interest rate on revenue bonds to finance the local share of the $28 million sewage export pipeline project was quickly accepted by an obviously pleased board of directors of the Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency last night.

Goldman, Sachs and Company of New York was the lowest of four bidders on revenue bonds of $4.2 million. That means Valley residents will pay $3,768,971.25 in interest over the next 20 years to repay the bonds.

The bonds had received only a median rating by two New York bond rating companies last week and the board appeared relieved to receive the 5.8 percent interest rate.

Law suits and an initiative action to force a second vote on the project had LAVWMA members concerned they may have been charged a higher interest rate, which would have been borne entirely by Valley residents.

A difference of only .08 percent between the winning bid and the next closest submittal would have meant a $50,000 difference in interest payments over the bonds 20 year life. A 7 percent interest rate would have meant an additional $800,000 in interest payments by comparison, said financial consultant Ernest Bodnar.

The project, of which 87.5 percent is financed by federal and state grants, is expected to begin construction next month.

Livermore gets budget glance

LIVERMORE — Planning commissioners and city council members got their first informal look at the 1978-79 preliminary budget figures at a study session Tuesday night.

This marks the first year the budget will be done in a new format involving departmental programs.

The study session dealt briefly with departmental budget requests and looked at the summary of revenues by fund. City Manager Bill Parness emphasized that all figures were preliminary and changes would be made during the coming months before a final budget is presented.

Considerable time was given to Mayor Helen Tirsell's written statement regarding a possible annexation policy. They concluded they needed to develop some type of cooperation with the county where the city could support rural residential and where the city couldn't support such rural residential development.

They touched on the problems of defining low and moderate income housing, but could only come up with a general idea of a federal mandate basing the definition on cost of moderate income housing coming to about 80 per cent of income.

The discussion centered on new state legislation regarding annexation of small unincorporated "islands or fingers" comprising less than 100 acres. The report given to the group pointed out that in Livermore's case a number of areas that would be appropriate for annexation would not be possible because the size of the island may not exceed 100 acres.

Commissioners were concerned that possible short range strategy for low and moderate housing subdivisions should be considered permanent since their impact could be felt on long range strategy planning,too.

After going at great lengths on the budget, annexation policy and department status reports, the group just did a preliminary review of part of the ABAG environmental management plan.

B-1, out, Lab bomb still alive

Times Washington Bureau

A decade of research and controversey came to an apparent end Wednesday when the House voted down the B-1 bomber, 231-180.

Now the House, Senate and President are all on record in opposition to the low-flying, ultra-expensive manned bomber, the bomb for which was developed at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory.

However, there may still be a life for that bomb. Considerable support exists in Congress for the FB-111, a less expensive bomber not capable of such low (radar inhibiting) flights.

The Lab's Full Fuzing Option (FUFO) bomb — which is put forth as a major advance in inhibiting accidental release of radiation in a crash — could be used in the FB-111.

In Wednesday's vote the Bay area delegation unanimously opposed the B-1.

The House Wednesday reversed a December vote of 191-166 to produce the fifth and sixth models of the plane. Full scale production had already been defeated on a very close vote.

The reversal attributed to the fact that in the interim, the Senate voted, 58-37, against numbers five and six.

The size of that margin convinced House members that the Senate would not be quickly swayed in a House-Senate committee.

Furthermore, the B-1 was part of a catch-all appropriations bill which most members wanted passed without further delay.

It includes funds for Environmental Protection Agency construction grants and $1.4 billion for small business disaster loans, as well as money for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor, and, less important in House considerations, $17 million to unify the Department of Energy in one building.

Other than the B-1, all parts of the bill had been agreed to by both houses.

There is still a small possibility the B-1 issue could be technically revived if the President vetos the bill because of his opposition to the Breeder Reactor. That is the case because the B-1 vote was to rescind money that had already been appropriated. With no vote at all, it remains appropriated.

However, President Carter is seen as likely to spend that money, given the clear expression of both houses as well as his own anti-B-1 sentiments.

CETA supports shelter

The CETA positions will include a part-time bookkeeper, two full-time intake coordinators and a social service coordinator who will accompany the woman "to see that her needs are met in the community." This will include trips to welfare and other social service agencies, said Brown.

Services for battered women will include transportation and pick up from a neutral, concealed place, afternoon child care, crisis and peer counseling and the necessities of life, food clothing and shelter.

"In the beginning most services will be referral information to hospitals, relocation help, vocational resources and legal aid," said Brown.

The purpose of the shelter, said Brown "is to offer women who are victims of domestic violence an alternative to staying around. We are not promoting anything. If she chooses to stay at home and use us as an ear to listen, we'll support that.

"If she needs a place to stay one or two nights until her husband cools off, we'll support that. Or if she wants to leave, we'll help her make the transition into the community as a sole provider," Brown explained.

The location of the shelter will be kept concealed for the women's and their children saftey, said Brown who added that many times after a woman leaves home the man will come after her and when he finds her, he will beat her up again.

The pressing need now is for funds, said Brown. She estimates that the minimum budget for one year will be $74,000, "and that's with consumable goods and office supplies donated."

"We could really use a group to give a benefit for the Haven. We don't have the time for a fundraiser, with all our energies going into helping women and writing proposals," Brown added.

Some local individuals have pledged $10 to $15 each month to the Haven, and Brown said they hope to receive more pledges and cash donations. The shelter is also in need of a refrigerator, office supplies and canned goods.

Demos settle

Pleasanton, Livermore, Dublin Democratic Club members elected new officers this week, but not without some internal political strife.

Former president Alan Grossman and former secretary Birdie Bianchi withdrew their names from the list of nominees for president late Tuesday in an attempt to avoid a split in the club.

Grossman's motion won Tuesday, but no council candidate received the needed two/thirds endorsement vote due to the split in club members' beliefs.

Newly elected club officers are: president, James Rogan; vice-president, Jean March; secretary, Laura Maxwell; and treasurer, Sue Staley.

Club members, who normally meet at the Pleasanton Hotel, also voted to hold half their meetings in Livermore.

Sidhu on zoning

LIVERMORE — City council candidate Gurnam Sidhu feels the city is "the victim of tunnel vision" of incumbents regarding development of the area north of Portola Avenue near the freeway.

Sidhu said the residential zoning misses the opportunity of a major shopping center, partly because the city did not provide easy access and the visibility that the freeway can assure prospective companies.

"I hear comments that we could have a commercial establishment of the calibre of the Kaiser Research Center if we could zone that part of Portola Avenue commercial," the candidate explained.

He said he did not agree with the prevalent thinking of the present council that commercial development necessarily means "visual blight."

"We need balanced development to increase jobs locally," Sidhu noted, "to provide additional revenue and to minimize auto travel in the valley. This would probably also save more energy than that aborted energy ordinance."

Fox will answer

LIVERMORE — City council candidate Terrence Fox will hold a coffee and question-and-answer session at his home at 1 p.m. this Sunday at 2794 Tahoe Dr. The public is invited to meet the candidate.

Walt Disney fourth grade students discover what art treasures are inside "Art In a Trunk." Looking over the situation are Lisa Daves, Kim Rennie, Michael Davis, Michelle Priestley and Richard Rider.

Unique are plan tried

SAN RAMON — Art in a trunk was rolled into room F-5 at Walt Disney School in San Ramon yesterday to provide fourth grade students with an extra measure of art appreciation.

This is the first year the "Art In A Trunk" concept is being utilized in the San Ramon Valley Unified School District, according to F-5 teacher Dan Moirao. He is also art chairperson for Walt Disney School.

The trunk used yesterday was the first in a series of four. Each one contains a different theme. Yesterday's was called "Fins, Feathers and Furs." Books and objects inside the footlocker size trunk related to those three subjects.

Casters are attached to make it easier to get the trunk from place to place. The trunks are rotated in grades K through eight throughout the San Ramon Valley Unified School District. Each classroom gets to keep a trunk for two weeks.

Plans are being made to develop trunks for use at higher grade levels, Moirao said.

He added that the school district's Art Education Committee had been working on the Art In A Trunk idea for a year.

Behr's tax plan favored

A tax relief proposal by state Sen. Peter Behr that could short-circuit the controversial Jarvis-Gann tax initiative went to the Assembly's ways and means committee Tuesday.

The Behr measure is seen as a palatable tax relief proposal by many school and municipal districts, who have already expressed fears over what the proposition on the June ballot might do to tax revenues.

Darrell Carter, business manager for the Murray School District, told school board members Tuesday the Behr measure calls for a 40 per cent reduction in local property taxes. The "difference," to maintain the support balance for public agencies, would come from the state surplus and an increase in sales tax on homes that are sold.

Assemblyman Floyd Mori of Pleasanton is a member of the ways and means committee now looking at the Behr proposal.

Carter averred that Gov. Edmund G. Brown's support of the measure could speed it through committee and onto the floor of the Assembly before the June 6 elections.

Assistant Superintendent Heinz Gewing reported that the enrollment projection for the fall of 1978-79 is 4,507.Should that estimate hold up, the district enrollment would then be at an all-time low. The student population "peaked" in 1973 at 5,100.

In other business, Superintendent Jessie Kobayashi gave a status report on how the district is accomplishing its objectives for the current school year.

Mary Jane Hyde, Cheryl Joyce, Jean Suda, and Doug Adams were appointed summer school administrators.

The district severed its architectural agreement with the Berkeley firm of Cousteau Aitken, Inc. by agreeing to a final payment of $8,857.13 for work on the Dolan school siteproject.

The latter site is in the Silvergate section of Dublin and was proposed for an intermediate school.

Dr. Kobayashi's report on objectives was tied to four areas; the instructional program, communications and public relations, personnel, and administration.

Trustee Anne Henderson and principals Ellen Nelson and Joe Kappeler have been working on developing a district philosophy, Dr. Kobayashi added. A proposal also has been developed for a Special Education planning grant, and the district has been seeking ways to improve state programs in Early Childhood Education and the Mentally Gifted Minors.

A series of Monday night meetings in April have been setup to accomplish board evaluation of Dr. Kobayashi.

The board also acted to endorse a proposed moratorium on all substantive educational legislation, as authored by Assemblyman Dennis Mangers.

City denied sewer ties by RWQC

LIVERMORE — The city was turned down on requests for 13 separate sewer connections at Regional Water Quality Control Board this week as a result of the board's concern about the LAVWMA project.

City manager Bill Parness told the combined study session of city council and planning commission members that the water control board had not even put the requests on the agenda and merely denied them under communications.

They also turned down the request for lifting of the cease and decease order. He said he had hopes they would consider it next month if the LAVWMA project can be resolved.

Public Works Director Dan Lee made the requests to the board, but the water quality control people indicated the main thrust of the cease and desist order is to push the LAVWMA project ahead.

He left blood debt

PLEASANTON — Joseph (Bud) Wicks went into Valley Memorial Hospital over a month ago. After several operations for cancer, the 63-year-old sales broker died last Friday.

His medical insurance covered everything but the many pints of blood he needed. Now his wife, June, faces the task of raising about 110 pints of blood or $5,500 to pay back the Blood Bank of the Alameda, Contra Costa Medical Association.

Most blood banks give the life-giving fluid on a "pay after you get well" basis. Recipients have six months in which to raise two pints for every one Pint used — or to pay the bank $50 for each pint.

"But what would have happened if the blood wasn't there when he needed it? So, I guess it was worth it," says June, recalling those days when she thought the transfusions might save her husband's life.

The Wicks have lived here 18 years. Bud belonged to the Castlewood Country Club and was very active in the Dale Carnegie Institute.

The blood bank told The Times that donations of any blood type can be credited to Wicks' account within the next four months. Only Red Cross blood banks won't transfer donations to a different bank.

Any person wishing to donate a pint can reach the blood bank by calling the operator and asking for Enterprise 17366 — a toll free number.

If a person has an account in a different blood bank, the pints can be transferred to Wicks' account upon request. But banks must know his full name, Joseph N. Wicks, and the hospital that treated him, Valley Memorial.

Scholarship for Dublin's maid

DUBLIN — A $750 scholarship is being offered by the Dublin Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with their annual Maid of Dublin contest.

This year, the scholarship will be awarded April 16 at Castlewood Country Club.

Applications are available at the chamber office, 7996 Amador Valley Blvd., Dublin and at Dublin and California high schools.

Young women living within the Dublin San Ramon Services District are eligible to apply. The deadline for returning the applications is March 1.

Dublin resident applicants must be 17 years old by Aug. 1 and not over 25. San Ramon applicants must be 17 by Aug. 1 and not over 23.

Both Alameda and Contra Costa county applicants have to have been residents of their respective areas continuously since Jan. 1977. They have to have been California residents since Aug. 1, 1976.

If a young woman from Contra Costa County wins, she will represent Dublin at the Contra Costa County Fair in Antioch. An Alameda County resident will attend the Alameda County Fair in Pleasanton.

Tickets for the luncheon and Maid contest will be available at the chamber office for $7.50 per person.

Anyone wishing to donate funds toward the scholarship award should call the chamber office at 828-6200.

The chamber plans to make this scholarship a continuing part of the Maid of Dublin Pageant, according to pageant Chairman Ron Pacheco.

Riles puzzled by Jarvis tax plan

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State school Superintendent Wilson Riles announced his candidacy for re-election today and said the Jarvis property tax initiative would "destroy education in California as we know it."

The $7 billion property tax cut, Proposition 13 on the June 6 ballot, would cost schools $2.5 billion, about 38 percent of their revenue, Riles said at a news conference.

Unless the state makes up the money by raising taxes, he said, class size will increase to between 45 and 60 students, many schools will close, programs will be slashed, and thousands of employees will be laid off — 40,000 in the Los Angeles district alone.

The initiative also was criticized at a news conference by the California League of Women Voters. Its president, Joan Rich of Atascadero, said the Jarvis measure would unfairly distribute tax burdens and "could make a shambles of local government."

Riles, the first black to hold statewide office in California, confirmed his previous statements in interviews that he would seek a third four-year term.

He said his achievements included passage of school finance legislation that guarantees "educational equity and adequacy," and reform programs that have improved test scores in the early grades.

Job training meet

Valley residents ages 16 to 21 who are presently out of school and/or unemployed are invited to an informational meeting this afternoon sponsored by the Valley Employment and Training Program.

The meeting is scheduled for 3 p.m. at Valley High School on Dublin Boulevard in Dublin.

Scott Heston, Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) administrator for the Amador School District, will discuss the intensive training program starting March 1 at Foothill High. Persons attending will also be given assistance on filling out application forms for the program.

Troop 205's 'thank you'

Folklore has it that George Washington chopped down a cherry tree. The girls of Brownie Troop 205 of Pleasanton, being conservation and environment-minded, outdid George earlier this week by presenting a tree for planting at Alisal School. The troop has been studying plants and decided to offer the tree as "thanks" for being permitted to use school facilities and in commemoration of Washington's Birthday Wednesday and Arbor Day March 7. Assisting in planting the tree are Tony Coelho, left, principal John Bristow, holding tree, and troop leaders in back, including Pat Day at right.

Amador students compete

PLEASANTON— Four students from Amador Valley High School have been selected to compete in Bank of America's 1978 Achievement Awards program, principal Ralph Laird announced yesterday.

These top-ranking students and their study fields are : Brent Cullimore, science and mathematics; Susan Sturmer, liberal arts; Mary Frapwell, fine arts; Terri Crawford, vocational arts.

The four winning seniors, who each receive a personally-engraved plaque, will compete March 28 with students from neighboring high schools. Judging at this zone event will be conducted by a panel of educators and business and community leaders, and will be based on written compositions, group discussions, scholarship and civic and school activities.

First-place winners in this event then advance to the regional finals. Second and third-place zone winners in each field receive $100 and $75, respectively.

In the finals, zone winners will compete for top prizes of $1,000, $750 and $500. All other finalists receive $250.

The new crop of farmers — they mean business

This week, Future Farmers of America celebrates its 50th anniversary. These farmers are bright and aiming for success

Times Lifestyle

They're bright, they're young, they're aggressive. And they mean business.

No, that's not a description of some up-and-coming advertising executives or salesmen. It's a look at a group which claims to be one of the largest youth organization in the country, determined to make good — and make money — without succumbing to a 9 to 5 office routine.

They're known as the Future Farmers of America (FFA), which this week celebrates its 50th anniversary.

"We'd like to do away with the rootin' tootin' drugstore-type cowboy image," says John Post, a 16-year-old Livermore High junior and FFA member who belongs to a third-generation local farming family.

He cites a case in point: "Jimmy Carter was the secretary for the Plains, Georgia chapter of FFA," he says, "and Billy Carter was an FFA president."

Like Jimmy and Billy, John's got goals when it comes to his life — a master's degree at UC Davis, getting farm experience and buying his own land. Farming, he says, is no longer just a simple country boy's way of making a living.

"You have to have a business and plant science background to be a farmer," he says. "It's agribusiness. Farmers are moving onto big corporate farms." And "most of the guys that are farming now," he adds, "have a college degree."

At a recent Rotary Club meeting, John told members that, in the beginning, he was "a scared freshman" at Livermore High. "I didn't have any ambition," he adds.

Somehow, he got involved in the large variety of agriculture classes at the high school, which range from horticulture and meat butchering to sciences.

Some of John's high school curricula includes plant sciences, management practices, livestock production, agricultural science and mechanics, which he says is his favorite class.

"I got into it to fix up my truck," he says. "It was an old junker I got for $50." Now, he adds, it's got a working engine, and it serves him just fine.

John became one of some 20,000 FFA members in 300 California high schools after beginning his vocational education classes — and he has plenty of praise for what the group has done for him.

"I've learned about leadership, responsibility," he says. "I've gotten a chance to put into practice what I've learned in class."

The practice John speaks about takes place on the family farm, bought in the '30s by his Danish grandfather and presently up for sale because "we just can't make money on it anymore."

He grows five acres of his own walnuts, raises sheep and then spends time on a farm up in Tracy, learning the ropes first-hand. John says he's "in the fields at 6:30 a.m." sometimes, especially during the busy harvest seasons. The work, he adds, has given him lots of lessons — some of them tough ones — about the management of a farm. "I bought 10 sheep," he says, "and if they get sick, I'm the one who has to pay. There's been times when I've sat up a few nights, worrying about those sheep."

Other duties: pruning, irrigation and fertilizing, hiring and paying harvest labor — in addition to school work, club activities and even some public speaking.

Post heads out to his five-acre spread of walnut trees to inspect the crop with Jim Coelho, head of the Livermore High agriculture department. Students in the department are learning everything from mechanics to plant sciences to handle the variety of jobs in the field, Coelho says. Agriculture, he adds, is the nation's number one industry, and California alone provides 40 percent of the country's crops.

He's precise about the money he's earned at county fairs, selling his sheep — $24.88 one year, $115 the next. He's got a lawyer and is considering opening a checking account to manage his finances. No small feat for someone who describes himself as "a kid who's still got a lot to learn."

Why would a young guy take on such responsibilities, for a job that even farmers complain is becoming increasingly difficult to make a living at?

"I'd go up the wall in an office job," says John. "Farming is in my blood. I've been exposed to it all my life, and I can't remember a time when I didn't want to be a farmer."

He's philosophical about the present plight of the farmer, as publicized by recent national strikes.

"The reason that farming is getting harder," says John, "is that the capacity to produce is being increased. Farm strikes are bringing to the attention of the American people that farmers are in trouble." One solution, he adds, is to work in corporate farming, agribusiness or agricultural co-ops.

Though John has been more concerned with soils and plant science (he's been a member of the club's land-judging team for almost three years) in FFA, other students are working in a variety of activities with the group.

Livermore, John contends, is an area strongly concerned with livestock, so many of the members "live in town, but raise their animals out in the country."

Last year, John points out proudly, the Livermore High soils team with FFA missed going to the national finals by 7 out of 900 points.

This year, he says, "we're going all the way to the state finals."

It's because of those national and state contests, he adds, that the 124 Livermore High FFA members get to meet students, teachers and supervisors from all over the state and the country.

"I've met people from Truth or Consequences, Ariz., and Jamul, California, to give you some examples," John says. "There's such diversity."

Whatever ideas he has for a farming career, John contends that being rich is really not one of them. "I'd like to make a living and be comfortable," he says. And since the average college graduate with an agriculture backround starts out with a salary in the $10-$12,000 range, "plus fringe benefits," John says he doesn't have to worry too much.

In farming, he adds, "you have to be willing to take a risk," as well as work hard, get an education and get "both the theory and the practice" in the field.

On a day's round of chores, John tends to his tractor at the family's Livermore farm.

Livemore High: they're preparing kids for the largest U.S. industry

There are more than a couple of reasons why the Livermore High School agriculture department is perhaps the largest in the entire North Coast area.

Where else can students learn about growing house plants, wild game birds, mechanics, land surveying and even meat butchering in one spot?

The department, which instructs some 500 students, is headed by instructor Jim Coelho, who says that the five instructors and one student teacher preside over one of the largest agriculture departments in the state.

"The administration has backed the program a great deal," Coelho says. And, he adds with a smile, "Agriculture is the number one industry in the country, and California produces 40 percent of the nation's food." In such an extensive field, he contends, "there are quite a few opportunities for students — agricultural journalism, finance, marketing, advertising."

Variety seems to be the key at the department, where about one quarter of all students belong to the Future Farmers of America, according to Coelho.

In the meat processing classes, taught by John Greci, students make linguisa, smoked bacon and other delicacies using one of the largest smoking facilities — outside of a few business enterprises — in the Valley, Coelho says.

"There's excellent placement" in jobs with those students, he adds, since many of them are snapped up "by stores like Alpha Beta, and others go into their own meat-cutting businesses."

All kinds of studies and 500 students

For 10 cents a pound, the kids will butcher, weigh and wrap huge quantities of meat, which comes to the school in trucks, Coelho adds.

Outside in a back field, the department has built up a collection of hundreds of game birds, including "ring neck pheasant, peacocks, doves and chuckars," explains Coelho. "It gives students an appreciation of natural wildlife, breeding and hatching," he says, "and it can stimulate interest in forestry too."

The department, which is financed by the local school district, vocational education federal funds and the Regional Occupational Program, has "just about an even number" of males to females, Coelho says.

Ornamental horticulture, he adds, is becoming popular with many students, who sponsor a house plant sale annually in an effort to raise more program funds, Coelho adds.

Still planned in the future is a pond "for the hatching and rearing of fish." Coelho adds, "because the trend in rural recreation is toward a lot of private fish and game farms."

Most of the students, he says, will probably enter their field "in agribusiness," rather than as independent farmers — and with a college degree, they'll earn a starting salary which probably ranges between $10-$12,000 annually. The industry is still a growing one, he says, because "one third of all jobs are related to agriculture."

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My 5 - year - old son still sucks his thumb. It not only embarrasses my husband and me, but we're afraid it's going to ruin his mouth and teeth. Try as we may, we can't break him of the habit. My husband has threatened to make him wear gloves or to tie his hands in old - fashioned string pajama suits like he wore as a baby so his thumb is covered at night. He's an only child. We wonder if he needs a brother or sister. Or, are we doing something wrong? We love him, but we're not wildly demonstrative people like some parents. We do tell him we love him, however, and we think he knows this. Any suggestions for breaking his habit? L.A.

DEAR L.A.: First of all, don't even consider putting your son in any kind of special uniform, mittens, gloves or sleep suit that would inhibit him. I believe this does much more harm than good. I think parents tend to overemphasize effects of thumb - sucking.

The habit, however, is usually a symptom of a sense of loss. The child needs reassurance and he's getting this temporarily from his thumb. This is what he's decided to use for a security blanket.

Telling a child that you love him isn't enough. He needs to be cuddled and touched. This is a primary way of communicating and loving. The child who doesn't receive enough touch stimulation and reassurance often resorts to nail - biting or thumb - sucking.

Apparently, you and your husband are somewhat afraid of touching. If you want your child to grow up adjusted, secure and comfortable in his relations with others, it's essential that you try to overcome this reluctance to show physical affection.

Children who are denied this kind of communication or reassurance have much more difficulty getting along later on. They may literally be out of touch or they may rub people the wrong way.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I recently visited my son and his wife and was shocked to see how their youngsters, aged 8 and 10 behave. They're so rough with each other and with other children. I believe one of the reasons is that they're parked in front of the TV set almost every moment. G.M.

DEAR G.M.: While a child's parents are the most important influence on the child's behavior, there's no doubt that heavy TV viewing can and does have a serious effect, especially if the children are allowed to watch violent shows.

Children become so accustomed to watching TV violence that they tend to become immune to it and to forget that being hit hurts. They also see men and women on TV take brutal blows and often survive with relatively little damage. These children may then express sincere surprise when other children are injured by what seems to them to be relatively harmless blows.

Parents should teach their children through example that violence is unacceptable. Unfortunately, they may get the impression from TV that violence is an exciting way of life, an adventure that society rewards. According to a Seattle physician, Dr. Michael Rothenberg, the viewing of TV violence definitely increases aggressive behavior in the young.

There are, of course, many educational shows that can have very positive effects on youngsters. I think you might consider the possibility that your grandchildren watched more TV during your visit than they might have otherwise been allowed to watch. Their parents might have wanted them out of your way, or they might have been more lenient with them in an attempt to avoid a scene in your presence.

"I'LL DO THE REFEREEING!!"

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is border-line blood pressure of approximately 140 over 110 and I'm only 25 years old. I'm 5 feet 8 and weigh 157 pounds. The doctor is checking my blood pressure by monthly visits because he says it is too early to draw a conclusion about this blood pressure. He says he wants to avoid drugs if my blood pressure isn't too high because of my age and the side effects of medicines.

What tells a doctor for certain that a person has high blood pressure? On one of the TV campaigns it says you must stay on the drugs for life and never quit. Why? What kind of side effects go along with the drugs? Is a person limited in his or her physical activity? Can high blood pressure be cured? What causes high blood pressure?

DEAR READER — You have a smart doctor. One blood pressure reading alone is not sufficient to make a diagnosis and repeat examinations are in order. Blood pressure is variable. The level goes up or down in relation to how much blood your heart pumps and how open your arteries are. If you get excited and your heart starts pumping out more blood, your pressure goes up. Your arteries are like a big plumbing system. If you open up all the faucets the pressure in the pipes rise. The same applies to your arteries; if they open the pressure in them falls, but if you contract them the pressure rises.

The opening and closing of the small arteries through out the body is controlled by nerve reflexes and chemicals. The control mechanism is very complex.

The doctor determines if you have high blood pressure or not by measuring it often enough over a period of time to confirm that it is significantly elevated most of the time and not just an office reaction.

I don't agree entirely with the TV ad you mentioned. If a person changes his lifestyle, loses weight, decreases salt intake and improves physical fitness he may have normal blood pressure without medications. If this happens there is little reason to continue the medicine. Of course only the doctor should make this determination. It usually involves taking a person who has persistent normal pressure off medicines and doing repeated checks to see if it remains normal or not.

The side effects cover the map. Different medicines have different side effects and different medicines act at different locations in the body (brain, nerve junctions, or the arteries) to lower the pressure.

A sensible exercise program is often beneficial with moderately elevated blood pressure. I would guess that in your age group with your mild readings you would be a candidate for a good exercise program with diet restriction to eliminate every ounce of fat you have.

Feb. 23, 1978

Extra responsibilities are likely this coming year, but they will be amply rewarded. There will also be lots of time for partying with an ever-expanding circle of friends.

PISCES (Feb.20-March 20) Avoid bargaining today with persons you hardly know. Barter with those whom you are close to and respect. You'll find far more profitable give-and-take.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll greatly enjoy the small jobs you hardly ever get a chance to do. Work around the house today, but don't leave a host of things undone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to go someplace to see a few new faces today. Listen to their talk and ideas, but keep it on a social level.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You manage things well today, whether it be applying your unique touch to a work situation or getting involved in making small changes around home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Put a high priority today on getting in touch with those close to you but far away, who have an interest in your work and welfare. Put if off and it won't happen.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22) Personal gains are very possible today, but not if you sit on your hands. You must provide the impetus for action. The results will follow.

VIRGO (Aug.23-Sept.22) Self-confidence keys moving ahead today. You can juggle a lot of things and do it well, so long as you're sure of yourself and keep busy.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct. 23) Level with a pal today. He'll feel more like letting you in on some valuable secrets. If he knows where you stand, he's likely to feel he can trust you.

SCORPIO (Oct.24-Nov.22) It's a fine day to get with the crowd and tour the mall. Buy only what you want, however, and not what they're pushing today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.23-Dec.21) Do your share today. Your cohorts will readily join in too. The aspects are good for gain. They'll come if everybody pitches in.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan.19) An honest evaluation of what you can do and what it's worth is essential today. Realism will fend off those who could try to cheat you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.19) In business you can star today if you're willing to be as good a listener as you are a talker. Your prospects enjoy you, but they like to be heard, too.

"Too bad about my jack of clubs," said South. "If I didn't hold that card, I would have made the hand."

"Too bad about your lack of sense," retorted North. "You should have made the hand by refusing to take that club finesse."

West had cashed his king of hearts and shifted to the jack of diamonds. South had won in dummy; taken the ace of trumps; led a second trump to his queen and played his 10 of hearts.

West had won with his ace and led a third heart to dummy's queen. South discarded a diamond, cashed his second high diamond and abandoned the suit when East showed out in order to take and lose the club finesse. West's king of clubs was the third defensive trick. He led the club back and South still had a diamond loser.

North was right about South's bad play. That club finesse was not going to work. West needed the king of clubs for his opening bid. So, South should have simply played out his ace and jack of clubs. West would score his king, but be forced to give South a ruff, discard and the rest of the tricks.

Bike trails to get improved

OAKLAND — The bikeway on East Avenue near Livermore between the Livermore city limits and Lawrence Livermore Laboratory will be improved by Eugene Alves Construction Co., supervisors decided this week.

Alves, doing work already in the area, entered a bid of $77,662. It was higher than the $75,000 estimate by the Department of Public Works, but it was the only bid.

Ordinarily the project probably would go out to bid again, but there is so much work right now for paving contractors and the bike trail involves so much hand labor because it is narrow, Alves probably is the only firm interested in the job, said Director of Public Works H.A. Flertzheim.

State funds will pay for $62,000 worth of the project.

Fund center boss

LIVERMORE — Norman Strehle has been elected president of the Emergency Fund Center. He will be assisted by Bertha Shook, vice president; Jolene Abrahams, secretary, and Robert Ellers, treasurer.

Ann Briley will continue to be in charge of food purchases for the center and Mary Ann Hannon will continue as publicity chairperson.

The Center helped 551 cases of individuals or families in 1977, who needed immediate temporary help with food, shelter, furniture, clothing or transportation.

The center, located at 2564 First St., also operates a small thrift store, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and 6-8 p.m. on Thursdays.

Keep 911 serious

OAKLAND — No dogs allowed.

Or cats, either.

When you call the new 911 emergency number in Alameda County (after it goes into effect May 31,) "don't bother the emergency officials with such complaints as cats in trees or sick dogs.

The new 911 number will be a hotline for serious human emergencies only, Chief Howard Garrigan told Alameda County supervisors yesterday.

Garrigan is the sheriff's department official working on implementation of the new emergency number.

Supervisors authorized a transfer of funds within the Office of Emergency Services yesterday for 17 radio dispatchers and three clerks to implement the new emergency communication system.

Alamo dispute on SRV general plan

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — The neighbors of the proposed Creeks of Alamo subdivision want more horses rather than houses on that Alamo property.

Residents whose homes adjoin the property between Vernal Drive and Stone Valley Road appealed to the Board of Supervisors Tuesday to overturn a recent San Ramon Valley Area Planning Commssion decision to allow 52 homes on the 51-acre parcel.

The supervisors, however, postponed their decision until March 7 to give themselves a chance to review the material presented.

The major controversery over the subdivision centers on the southern 33 acres known as the Ranger property where 40 homes are proposed. Opponents claim this ares should contain one-acre minimum lots and be rezoned accordingly.

They said this would conform to the surrounding properties whose owners have voluntarily agreed to rezone their parcels to country estates (one-acre) even though they are currently zoned for smaller lots. A measure pertaining to this will go before the SRV Planning Commission in the next couple of weeks.

The one-acre minimum, they explained, would permit the new homeowners to keep horses - a practice which they claim is an integral part of the rural lifestyle of the area.

The property in question, although zoned for half-acre parcels, was designated as an area of special consideration under the recently adopted SRV General Plan. This was done, said Suprvisor Eric Hasseltine, Danville, so that the property could be divided in a way that would conform with the area's topography.

The result, he said, was a number of sites more than an acre, with the average lot size three-fourths of an acre.

The upper 18 acres are zoned for country estates with 12 homes proposed.

One speaker, however, accused Hasseltine of misleading residents on the special designation.

Stone Valley Road resident Eve Auch said homeowners agreed to the designation, because they thought it meant only one-acre parcels would be permitted.

"We feel the homeowners have been badly mislead," she declared.

Hasseltine countered that with a one-acre minimum, the developer, to get as much out of the property as he could, would end up carving up the parcels in an unaesthetic and topographically destructive fashion.

"If it were R-40 (one-acre), there is danger of scalping the area," he said, because the developer would have to resort to massive grading.

By diversifying the size of the lots, "we have tried to take an approach that would satisfy everyone," he added.

Wilbur Duberstein, attorney for the developer, Diablo Homes, concurred with Hasseltine's observation saying "We certainly would cut this land to get the last lot out of it."

Other concerns were voiced by Vernal Drive residents, whose private road would have to be extended to accomodate the 12 proposed homes in the upper portion of the subdivision.

Jack Lucey of Vernal Area Improvement Association said subdivison approval should be contingent on the new homeowners agreeing to pay their share of the cost of road maintenance and that the developers pay for upgrading the existing road.

"They are the ones who will benefit from it," he said.

County fair booth nixed

OAKLAND — If the Alameda County Fair Board wants to continue the tradition of a county - sponsored display at the fair this summer, it will have to pay for it itself.

In yet another of its economy moves, county supervisors this week decided that it isn't worth $3,000 to have someone from the county's agricultural department spend the time to construct the booth and display the county's finest flowerings of agricultural enterprise.

So it's goodbye Sunol strawberries, Livermore wine, and a host of other agricultural products that graced the Alameda County display each year.

Unless the fair directors are willing to come up with the money themselves, it's no more agrarian cornucopia.

The fair's assistant manager, Pete Bailey, told The Times that other alternatives are being considered, for example, soliciting volunteers such as 4-H or farmers and ranchers to donate products and construct the display.

The fair board's agricultural committee will deal with the problem soon and will discuss it with the full board next monh.

"We're going to miss it," Bailey reflected. "We're sorry to lose it. The display was non - commercial and told about the county as a whole. The agricultural commissioner would get the choicest fruits and vegetables he could find from his field work and update them daily. It was an outstanding exhibit."

Don't judge these books by their cover

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is fooling tens of thousands of tourists who troop through the famed Red Room each year.

To impress the visitors, decorators have lined up a couple of dozen authors in a glass-front bookcase. Those whose names are emblazoned in gold on red leather bindings include Adam Smith, Goethe, Edmund Burke, Locke, Berkeley, Hume and Dante.

There's only one jarring note to this impressive display calculated to induce visions of a hard-working president spending off hours devouring classical literature.

These are bindings, not books. The space behind them is empty.

There are patches of snow around Washington, but in some White House offices thoughts already are turning to spring and prospects for another busy season for one of the nation's most publicized softball teams.

"Please don't write anything about us," urged Mark S. Weiner, manager of the White House team. "After all the publicity last year, we got about a thousand requests for games from all around the country."

Weiner, a staff assistant to President Carter, deals with presidential appointments and scheduling — and with scheduling the team that carries the White House banner.

Looking forward to launching the new season in April, Weiner so far has set up a game here that month with employees of WDIF Radio, Marion, Ohio.

In 1977, visiting teams came from as far away as Indianapolis and Atlanta. Pressure of business bars the White House stalwarts from traveling.

"Most of us are just out for the exercise," Weiner reported. In the next breath, however, he let his competitive instincts surface, saying that in setting up the 1978 schedule "we especially want to play those that beat us last year."

In a season stretching from April through September, the White House team last year won 46 games and lost 24.

Although Carter is enthusiastic about softball as a form of exercise, he never has played with the White House group. One can only imagine the hubbub he'd cause were he to show up at one of the public park diamonds the team uses.

Grizzlies, AV win openers

Darryl Lamb drove for a layup with five seconds to go to give California a 63-61 upset win over East Bay Atletic League Co-champion Livermore in the Shaughnessy Basketball Playoffs last nightin Livermore.

Livermore had a chance to win the game,with 16 seconds to go and the score 61-61 as they held the ball out of bounds.

Immediately, following the inbounds pass, though, Cowboy guard John Farfan stepped over the half-court line and turned the ball back over to the Grizzlies.

With the score still tied, the Grizzlies inbounded and Lamb took a pass at the top of the key and drove the lane for the winning shot.

Livermore quickly brought the ball down court, but Farfan's 30-foot jumper hit the rim and bounced off just before the buzzer.

Cal held a 59-53 lead with 2:52 left in the game before the Cowboys put together a grasp rally.

John Bachleda pumped in a jumper and Dick Patterson followed with a steal and lay-in to pull the 'Pokes to within two points, 59-57.

After Cal's Chuck Cary made one but missed the second of two free throw attempts for a 60-57 lead, Livermore's Farfan came back with a 25-foot bomb to make it 60-59.

Lamb was called for palming the ball while trying to run the clock down for Cal, so Livermore went ahead 61-60 on a 15-foot jumper by Ed Dante, his only two points of the night, with 1:40 to play.

Cal's Mark Kulak tied the game with 1:28 to go by hitting on one of two free throws, but Livermore snared the rebound on the errant second toss and proceeded to stall the clock down to 16 seconds before the fatal turnover.

Cal, who faces Amador Valley tomorrow at Dublin High, was led by Cary with 17 points, while Lamb added 14 and Kulak 11. Patterson topped Livermore with 17 points, while Farfan netted 16 and Brian Schweiger, who scored 12 points in the first half, fouled out in the second half and finished with 13.

Gus Bailey of New Orleans drives past Rick Barry of the Warriors.

It's little wonder a chorus of cheers rang out when Amador Valley High School's basketball team learned that California had beaten Livermore in its East Bay Athletic League playoff game last night.

The Dons, 57-51 winners over Granada in the other half of last night's action, get revenge.

And thanks to last night's results they get two chances.

With Livermore losing, Amador Valley gained the playoff point due the regular season champion which means Cal would have to repeat its season-ending upset of the Dons twice to reach the North Coast Section playoffs.

Last night, the Dons trailed for just one minute the entire game and were never down by more than a point.

Granada's Dan Lambert led the game in scoring with 19 points but couldn't connect at all in the first 12 minutes as the Dons ran up a good-sized lead.

Granada played a midly spread offense early in the game but Amador Valley's press seldom gave the Mats time to set up and Amador went up 11-5 before Granada called time out and then opened up its offense.

Still, with Lambert ice-cold and Rick Howard and Chris Kearns operating freely inside for the Dons, Amador Valley upped its lead to 10. before Scott Fulmer put the Matadors back to within striking distance.

Fulmer, a 5-foot-7 guard, drew a pair of fouls, popped in a jumper and converted a steal into a basket as Granada pulled to within four with five minutes left in the half.

It appeared, for a time, that the rest of the game might be played evenly with little threat to the Dons' lead. But Lambert finally got hot, scoring six of the last 10 points before halftime and Steve Robison's tip-in with 10 seconds to go staked the Mats to a 27-26 lead at the half; the last time they held the edge.

But any hope of another upset was quickly dashed as Amador's press wrecked havoc with the Mats' in the first two minutes of the second half forcing three turnovers that led to the Dons scoring the first eight points of the half.

Despite the fact that Amador's star, Chris Kearns, left the game with four fouls in the final minute of the first half and played only three and one half minutes of the second, the Dons were never without at least a three-point lead after that early third quarter binge.

Rick Howard led Amador Valley with 15 points while Kearns, despite his ful problems, tallied 11.

Trevino cold as weather

LAUDERHILL, Fla. — Lee Trevino, perhaps the most vocal in the field of 150, couidn't take the unusual cold and windy Florida weather Thursday, a day before the start of the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

"I just can't stand the cold," Trevino moaned after shooting a 4-over-par 76 in the pro-celebrity round of the tournament. "I'm one of the best wind players there is but I have a hell of a time in the cold."

Trevino, carrying a golf umbrella most of the round to block out the chilling wind before finally donning a jacket on the 12th hole, complained about the weather just about every hole.

"I should have gone to Boston to play this week," he told the gallery. "Isn't there a tournament in Worcester?

"Did you ever try to buy something for winter in Florida? A sweater or something? Forget it!"

Trevino, who has been having troubles with his back, said he usually wears a brace which gives off heat but he didn't bring it here because "I thought I was coming to Florida."

By most Northern standards, the weather wasn't too bad: temperatures reaching 55 degrees by midafternoon, winds from the northwest at about 20 miles an hour.

And it was sunny.

Normally, temperatures are in the 70s and 80s here this time of year.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Miami also said more of the same is due Thursday for the start of the $250,000 tournament over the 7,127-yard, par-72 Inverrary Country Club Course.

Jack Nicklaus, seeking his first tour victory this year, is the defending champion, having won the $50,000 first prize last year by five strokes with a 13-under-par 275. He also won the Tournament Players Championship here in 1976 with a tourney-record 19-under-par 269.

Nicklaus established the course record of 63 in 1975 in the Pro-Celebrity event.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who also shot a 76, came prepared for the cold weather. He wore a full-length baby panther seal coat on the course.

Warriors fall to Jazz

NEW ORLEANS — Center Rich Kelley scored 27 points and grabbed 21 rebounds Wednesday night as the New Orleans Jazz snapped an eight-game losing streak with a 116-91 victory over Golden State Warriors.

Kelley and forward Leonard "Truck" Robinson, who had 18 rebounds and 25 points, led New Orleans to a 62-42 advantage on the boards in the National Basketball Association game.

Golden State was led by center Robert Parrish's 25 points. The victory was the first for New Orleans since Feb. 1, when the Jazz beat Chicago at the end of a 10-game winning streak.

The score was knotted 30-30 after one quarter, but the Jazz roared to a 56-45 halftime lead and Golden State never came within 10 points in the second half.

New Orleans now has a 27-32 record. Golden State is 28-31.

E.J. Rankin scored five times to lead Tri-Valley to a 6-1 victory over Belmont in Mite "AA" Northern California Jr. ice hockey action recently.

The Mites clinched a tie for first place with the victory.

In Bantam "AA" action Tri-Valley took a 7-5 victory over Santa Rosa. Kenny Stevens scored two goals and Bart Schoefer, Billy Land, Joey Burke and Dave Dautel each had single goals for the winners.

Mike Draper was in goal for the winners. Sonny Delk and Schoefer each had two assists.

Tri-Valley dumped Hayward 11-2 in Squirt "AA" action. The winners scored five times in the first half and coasted in from there.

Kevin Medeiros and David Perona each had five goals for the winners. Bryan Long added a single goal.

Support for Kuhn firing growing

NEW YORK — A backroom movement by a handful of baseball owners intent on firing Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has gained support from roughly one-third of the teams, The Associated Press has learned.

Brad Corbett of Texas, the anti-Kuhn ringleader, has approached several sympathetic owners for support in the project, including Ray Kroc, the outspoken owner of the San Diego Padres.

"We had conversations on other subjects and it came up in conversation," said Kroc from his Chicago office. "I haven't played any part except to agree with those who have brought it to my attention.

"I would participate, and Brad has indicated that there are a number of other people who would participate."

An Associated Press survey has revealed that at least nine of the 26 teams would vote to fire Kuhn if a secret ballot were held today. Those teams are Baltimore, New York, Oakland, California, Texas and Chicago in the American League and Cincinnati, San Diego and Atlanta in the National League.

Kuhn's office said the commissioner was out of town Wednesday. A list of questions was submitted to Kuhn's office and relayed to Kuhn, who refused to comment on the matter.

Firing the commissioner would entail buying up the remaining five years of Kuhn's 7- year contract, a total sum of $875,000. That would break down to about $34,000 per club.

Even Charlie Finley, Oakland's financially strapped owner and a constant critic of the commissioner, said he could come up with funds. "I'd find the money," he said Wednesday from Chicago. "I'd even help out some of the others."

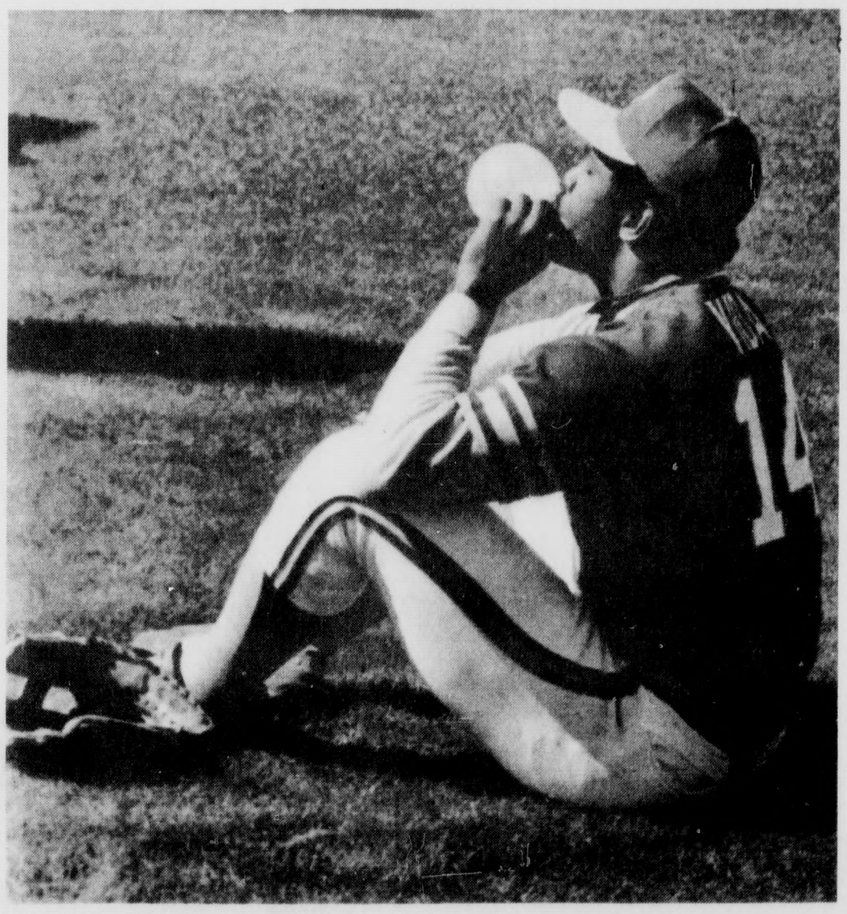
MESA, Ariz. — The Oakland A's spring training camp opened Wednesday, with pitchers and catchers in attendance and with the good news that left fielder Mitchell Page has agreed to contract terms.

"I'm very happy. I don't want to be too greedy. The man treated me very well," Page said from his home in Los Angeles in revealing he'd settled on a one-year contract with A's owner Charles O. Finley.

He said, "With a 120 percent raise, I'll be about the sixth highest paid player on the team, which isn't bad for a second-year man."

That would put his salary for the coming American League baseball season at $66,000, since he ended last season under a $30,000 contract. The rookie began the season at the minimum $20,000 but received a raise after getting off to a hot start.



A's Vida Blue blows a bubble during first day of spring practice in Arizona.

Winkles: the forgotten man?

Bobby Winkles had just carded a 76 but was as anxious to talk about baseball as his golf game.

Winkles, manager of the Oakland A's, has had a far quieter winter than he will have spring or summer. He hasn't heard from his boss Charlie Finley, something that may be a blessing in disguise the way Finley heats up the phone lines between Chicago and wherever his manager is located during the season.

Winkles may not have been the last to learn about the abortive Vida Blue trade, but he certainly wasn't one of the first.

Likewise, he read in a Southland paper that Jack McKeon, the man he replaced as manager of the A's, and Red Schoendienst would be his coaches this year. A friend told him that Johnny Sain had been hired as pitching coach, and poor Winks didn't know that Sain really hadn't joined the club yet.

"Mr. Finley has to do what he thinks best for the club," said Winkles about the Blue deal.

Although Dave Revering might have been able to play everyday and add punch to the Oakland lineup, Winkles sounds like he'd prefer to have Vida on his side. "Vida anchors our pitching staff. He makes it and us better because he's a stopper. If you've got one stopper, you can generally stay out of long losing streaks and you can make your winning streaks longer."

Winkles reported to training camp yesterday with only 13 pitchers on the roster, barely over a full complement for the upcoming season.

"Our pitching staff is going to be young, but Sain is good at developing pitchers. I'll talk everything over with him," said Winkles before we finally asked if he had heard something new on Sain other than the report then retraction on Sain's status from the Oakland front office.

In addition to Blue, the A's have several good young arms, several questionable young arms and an interesting young arm belonging to Matt Keough, who has been converted from a third baseman.

Son of journeyman player Marty Keough, Matt has been pitching only one year but "has a fine chance of making our club" accoring to Winkles.

Aside from Blue, the only "names" Winkles has to deal with are Manny Sanguillen, Billy North and Earl Williams. And Winkles may not have to deal with them long.

Sanguillen, since all Vida Blue deals are taboo according to the dictates of Bowie Kuhn, may be Finley's most valuable commodity at the trading table.

North has expressed a desire to get out of Oakland and will play out his option to do so. Although Winkles says he expects North to be in center everyday for him, Finley will probably think differently.

The A's are blessed with a couple of good youngsters in Wayne Gross and Mitchell Page, both of whom figure to improve on fine rookie seasons.

Shortstop Rob Piccolo had problems with major league pitching in his first season but seemed a little better at the end of the year.

Taylor Duncan, selected by the A's in the minor league draft, hit 27 homers in Triple A ball and could find a spot for himself at second base.

All in all, it looks like a team that Winkles might have had when he was the honcho at Arizona State except for the absence of guys named Jackson, Bando, Monday, etc.

"We're still an awfully young club, but we don't expect to get as many guys hurt again as last year. I think we'll be improved because of our experience last year," says Winkles, "but the whole West has improved."

Another thing that improved over the winter was Winkles' golf game, but he hopes he doesn't have many more chances to improve upon it until the end of the season.

In Winkles' case, he hopes that means October.

An unfair rap for the EBAL

On Sports

It's always difficult to compare high school leagues in different sports.

This is particuarly true in Northern California, where there is very little competition between leagues from different sections, and most high schools prefer to play teams within their own county limits.

But still, people do compare leagues, and they probably always will.

And when high school sports fans in the Bay Area and East Bay in general, talk about the relative strengths of prep leagues, they generally speak of the East Bay Athletic League as being less than awesome in the so-called "major" sports, football and basketball.

People point out that the EBAL champion has never won the North Coast 4-A championship football (forgetting that the playoffs have only been in effect for three years).

Well, the Diablo Valley Athletic League has never won a NCS 4-A championship in football either, and some people regard it as the strongest prep league in the East Bay.

Probably the main reason for the EBAL's inability to win the NCS crown is the fact the league annually has one of the most competitive title races in the area.

This past season several teams were in the running for the EBAL championship going into the last two weeks of the season. And the championship wasn't decided until the last week when San Ramon toppled Monte Vista, 7-3, to advance to the playoffs.

The year before Livermore and Granada tied for the crown when the 'Pokes beat Granada on the last week of the season to send both teams into the playoffs.

Both teams lost by one-sided scores in the first round of the playoffs but were probably so psyched up for their cross-town battle the week before they couldn't get up for the playoffs.

In 1975 Granada stunned the East Bay by defeating Mission San Jose, top-ranked in the area and one of the state's 10 best teams (according to one poll) 35-21 in the semi-finals.

The Matadors fell to Pinole Valley 21-3 in the finals but PV was probably the best team in the area that season.

This year San Ramon had the misfortune to meet Mission San Jose and the Warriors, anxious to make amends for their loss to Granada two years ago, rolled to a 42-14 win.

But the Wolves hurt themselves with bad breaks and interceptions and MSJ went on to capture the NCS 4-A championship.

Mission San Jose might have been the best team in the entire Northern California area this past year so San Ramon's loss was defintely not a disgrace.

In basketball the EBAL hasn't done well in postseason playoffs either but Amador Valley (the only EBAL team to ever play in the NCS playoffs) has been competitive the three years it's been held.

The Dons finished fourth in 1975 and went on to take the consolation crown in the Tournament of Champions, beating Lincoln of San Francisco and Bishop O'Dowd.

In 1976 Amador Valley lost a narrow decision to Hayward and last year the Dons gave favored Berkeley, a traditional basketball powerhouse, all it could handle, before falling 58-55.

Before the NCS started Dublin was regarded as one of the basketball powerhouses in the East Bay, winning the EBAL championship in 1972 and 1973 and turning in respectable showings at the Tournament of Champions.

So, while it may be true the EBAL does not rank with the Mission Valley Athletic League or the Richmond-Berkeley Athletic League in turning out traditional powerhouses in both football and basketball it generally has been competitive in those sports.

It's fairly easy for a high school team which breezes through a soft league schedule and endures very few injuries, to prime itself for the playoffs (particuarly in football). That's why the MVAL has done well in the football playoffs. It's champion has had few challenges in league play and doesn't have to worry about battling a tough rival in the last game of the season often.

The EBAL, of course, has been the complete opposite.

In a way, the NCS playoffs have been climatic for the EBAL representives.

After the grueling seasons they have to go through just to win the league championship anything in the NCS playoffs is frosting on the cake.

AV hopes for 14-0, girls finish

Amador Valley High School's girls basketball team will attempt to make it a perfect season when it hosts San Ramon in the East Bay Athletic League finale tonight.

The Dons are 13-0 in league play and are a strong bet to challenge for the North Coast Section championship this season. Last year the Dons finished second to powerful Pittsburg.

In other contests tonight Foothill travels to Livermore, Granada is at Dublin and Monte Vista hosts California.

In action Tuesday night the Dons crushed Monte Vista 63-37, Dublin raised its record to 10-3 with a 52-40 win over San Ramon, Granada stopped Foothill 51-46 and California nipped Livermore 53-52.

Jayne Kuhns led AV's victory with 18 points, all on field goals.

The Dons jumped off to a 13-4 first-quarter lead and were never threatened.

Joanne Callender and Clare Allen each had 13 points for Dublin as the Gaels led all the way over the Wolves. No San Ramon player scored in double figures.

Lynn Bousilman was hot for Granada as she poured in 24 points to spark the Matadors. Julie Kumpf added 11 points, including seven in the final minute.

Fresno State coach

Raiders interest Sweeney

FRESNO (AP) — Jim Sweeney, who led Fresno State University to its first Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship, has confirmed he is giving "strong consideration" to an offer to join the coaching staff of the 1977 Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders.

Sweeney, 48, said he will make his decision "in the next few days." The 30-year veteran of high school and collegiate coaching said he spent several days over the weekend in Oakland with Raider officials discussing the offer.

"This has been on my mind for quite some time now," Sweeney said of the pro offer. "I've had pro offers before, from the 49ers and John Ralston former Denver Bronco head coach. At this stage of my coaching career, I've been asking myself why I didn't try it earlier — four, five, six years ago — when I had the opportunity," he said.

Sweeney took over the Fresno State head coaching position in 1976 and followed an opening 6-5 season with a 9-2 success to bring the Bulldogs their first PCAA championship. Last year Sweeney was named PCAA Coach of the Year.

He previously coached the Washington State Cougars for eight years with an overall 26-59-1 record and he led the Montana State Bobcats to three Big Sky Conference titles in five years.

Stompers, SJ sign still more

The San Jose Earthquakes and Oakland Stompers each signed players Tuesday.

The Earthquakes picked up Dusan Kukic of Yugoslavia to take the place of Tony Simoes in midfield. Simoes won't be playing for the 'Quakes this season.

Lukic comes from the OFK First Division team in Belgrade. The 5-foot-8 29-year old star is highly regarded by Earthquake coach Gabbo Gavric and should fill the gap left by the veteran Simoes.

San Jose also came to terms with Victor Kodelja. That brings the totl number of players in camp at West Valley College to 20. English defender Ian Wood and Yugoslavian sweeper Dave Davidovic aren't expected to arrive for three more weeks.

Paunovich, 30, is captain of the Partizan team of Belgrade. He played in Holland last season and is highly regarded in Europe. Paunovich has made 44 appearances with the Yugoslav national team.

Potts wins award

Steve Potts of Amador Valley High School is this weeks' winner of the Alameda County Flecto Prep of the Week award for his outstanding performance in last weekend's North Coast Section wrestling tournament.

A senior, Potts is a two-time Flecto winner.

Rochelle Lawson of Pittsburg was the Contra Costa winner along with Warren Turnage of Clayton Valley.

Lawson is a 5-foot-4 guard on the Pirate girls' basketball team. In a 95-39 win over College Park she hit for 16 points and had seven steals. She also collected nine rebounds.

She also led her team to a victory over Ygnacio Valley with 27 points and 11 steals. She has an outstanding shooting percentage from the floor.

Turnage, a 5-foot-5 123 pound wrestler, won the NCS title with three pins out of five wins in the tournament.

He is 30-0 on the season and 155-11 in his overall high school career. Last year he was the 115-pound champion.

San Mateo County's winner was Elaine Parker of Oceana, a outstanding track sprinter, and Mark Cosenza of Riordan was the San Francisco County winner. Cosenza led the Cursaders to the West Catholic Athletic League title, scoring both goals in a 2-0 win over St. Ignatius.

The Red Baron tops the list for dining out

Without a doubt, the Red Baron Steak House has got to rate as one of the best, if not THE best dinner house in the Valley. And, what makes their dining adventure tops on the list? It's a combination of excellent cuisine matched with great atmosphere and warm, friendly service. These traits alone make the Baron an outstanding choice for dinner not even considering that they feature live entertainment every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. This week's attraction happens to be "The Nuclear Test Band," — a group from Hayward who will be there through March 11.

Dinner begins with a walk through the Red Baron's hall of fame — collection of old photographs starring top pilots and aircraft from the biplane era. If you get there early, chances are you'll be seated in a romantic booth complete with a flickering candle and a live carnation.

Taped selections of contemporary music adds a mellow touch to the evening, as a waiter brings the menu to your table inscribed on an ammunition shell casing. The Baron's King crab legs makes an excellent choice because they are so huge and extend beyond the plate. Succulent Teriyaki Sirloin is another specialty fixed tenderly with a tasty sauce by a master of the culinary art. They also have a hardy salad bar and Heineken on tap. To locate the Red Baron, just take Airway Boulevard in Livermore off of I-580 and cruise along the fairways of Los Positas Golf Course until reaching the club house. You can't miss it.

One of the romantic booths at the Red Baron restaurant. They have several like is one made from a large wine cask.

Sex trade

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A 70- year-old orthopedic surgeon has been fined $1,260 and sentenced to three years probation in a case involving a trade of drugs for sex.

He is Herbert C. Sanderson, a former member of the executive board of the state fair, a former physician for the San Francisco 49ers football team, and a frequent expert witness in medical malpractice suits.

His probation report, available Tuesday, said Sanderson had been having sexual relations with a patient, Ann Fontana, now 41, and her roommate, since 1971 in exchange for non-narcotic drugs.

The state Bureau of Investigation and Narcotic Enforcement said he had prescribed at least 200 amphetamine-like drugs and 100 seconal-type drugs a week to Ms. Fontana, using at least 13 different names on prescriptions.

State office

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — James Browning, the former U.S. attorney who successfully prosecuted Patricia Hearst at her 1976 bank robbery trial, has declared his candidacy for state attorney general.

Browning, 45, said in a press conference here Tuesday that he will challenge state Sen. George Deukmejian of Long Beach for the Republican nomination in the June 6 primary election.

The former prosecutor, now in private practice, acknowledged that he doesn't have much money for a statewide contest, but added that he "intends to spend small but perform tall."

Browning said he hoped to play down his role in the Hearst trial. But he made it clear that his career as a prosecutor will be the cornerstone of his campaign.

He was the chief prosecutor for the San Mateo district attorney's office until he was appointed U.S. attorney for Northern California in 1970.
